Whereas Bangladesh is chiefly an agricultural country, agricultural development provides the bases of economic development of the country, the development of agricultural extension profession may open the door of agricultural development. Understanding this truth several thinkers engaged in the agricultural extension professors (Appendix-A) met in the campus of the Department of Agricultural Extension and Teachers Training on the 29th December 1978 under the leadership of the then Head of the name of Bangladesh Agricultural Extension Society aiming at institution and stability of personal and casual efforts of furthering professional standard of agricultural extension work.

Whereas for proper management of the Society a nominated committee (Appendix-B) prepared a constitution in English which was approved by the general body in its annual meeting held on 2nd July, 1985.

Whereas with a view to according government registration to gain legal status it became imperative to translate the constitution and a nominated committee (Appendix -C) actually translated the constitution in Bengali on which the members of the executive committee offered learned opinions.

And whereas prior to accord registration the removal of the errors and omissions in the original constitution was of utmost essential.

Therefore an extended and corrected constitution in Bengali prepared on the basis of translated original English constitution and the opinions of the learned members of the Executive Committee of the Society, is presented in the General Meeting of the Society held to-day the 21st July, 1989.

The Bengali Constitution and its latest English version is hereby adopted and will remain enforced from today the 21st July, 1989.
